About Gi60:

Gi60 was created by Steve Ansell, artistic director of Screaming Media Productions in 2003. He was curating a writing festival at Harrogate Theatre, UK, and looking for ways to offer more opportunity for writers to have their work staged. The idea of staging a one minute play festival was actually thanks to Christopher Durang and his anthology 27 Short Plays which contains a play titled "One Minute Play." In 2004, the first Gi60 was presented with 90 one-minute plays performed in two separate shows.

Steve approached longtime colleague and fellow director Rose Burnett Bonczek at Brooklyn College and, in 2005, Gi60 International was born. Both UK and US festivals were a massive success. Over the years Gi60 has undergone a number of changes. The UK festival moved from the Harrogate Theatre to the Viaduct Theatre in Halifax and now has its home at stage@leeds.edu, at Leeds University. The US festival left its home of 15 years at Brooklyn College and will now present at The Tank Theatre in Manhattan. The Gi60 channel on YouTube, which contains almost every one-minute play performed since 2004, has received over 150,000 hits. In 2017 Steve and Rose published One Minute Plays: A Practical Guide to Tiny Theatre with Routledge Press. And this year, Houston Community College has joined Gi60 with the first Gi60 Houston!

Gi60 is an all-volunteer organization dedicated to the celebration, creation and support of one minute stories. Our goal is to provide as many opportunities as possible for playwrights and artists, and to increase access to their stories through multiple platforms. Gi60 is committed to inclusion, promoting diverse voices from around the world, and supporting fellow artists and organizations dedicated to the one minute form.
